Go green

These days, Americans are learning that our actions, both individually and collectively, affect the very air we breathe. Fortunately, we're also finding ways to reduce waste and conserve natural resources — and maybe breathe a little easier as a result.

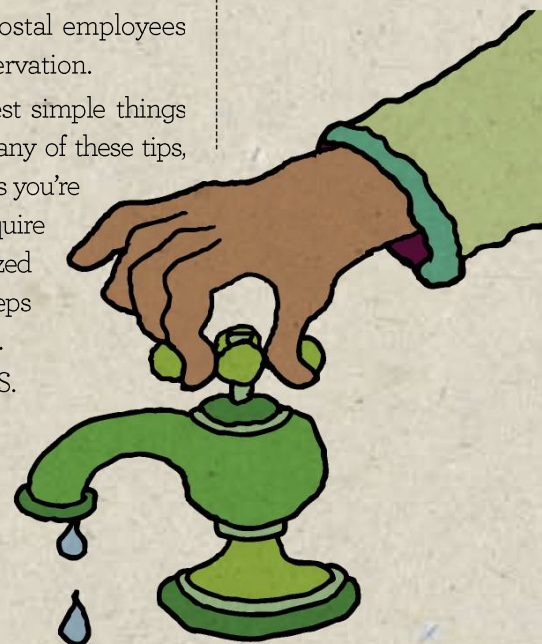

At the Postal Service, we're doing our part. We're the only mailing and shipping company in the world whose packaging, stamped cards, and stamped envelopes must meet standards for human health, environmental health, and recyclability. And so do our stamps, including the new Go Green stamps.

To cut greenhouse gas emissions 20 percent by 2020, we're conserving energy at thousands of facilities and finding ways to use less petroleum fuel and water. We're committed to reducing landfill waste. In 2010, we recycled more than 222,000 tons of material — an 8,000-ton increase from the previous year — with the help of postal employees nationwide who are helping us create a culture of conservation.

Playful but purposeful, the Go Green stamps suggest simple things everyone can do to make our environment healthier. Many of these tips, such as turning out lights when leaving a room, are things you're probably already doing. Others, like composting, require more of a commitment. Still, we think you'll be both amazed and encouraged when you see that taking even small steps quickly leads to big results — and a cleaner world for us all.

A self-supporting government enterprise, the U.S. Postal Service is the only delivery service that reaches every address in the nation, 150 million residences, businesses and Post Office Boxes. The Postal Service receives no direct support from taxpayers. With 36,000 retail locations and the most frequently visited website in the federal government, the Postal Service relies on the sale of postage, products and services to pay for operating expenses. Named the Most Trusted Government Agency five consecutive years and the sixth Most Trusted Business in the nation by the Ponemon Institute, the Postal Service has annual revenue of more than $68 billion and delivers nearly half the world's mail. If it were a private sector company, the U.S. Postal Service would rank 26th in the 2008 Fortune 500.

Want to help the

Go green

Governments and corporations are taking major steps to reduce their environmental impact — including the United States Postal Service — but the opportunity to live greener belongs to each of us. The new Go Green stamps help show us how.

"We could have shown big concepts or broad-stroke initiatives, like wind power or solar power," says William Gicker, creative director of Stamp Development, "but we wanted to send the message that each one of us can take small, everyday steps to make our world a greener place."

These positive steps — from riding bikes to planting trees — won't help just the environment. They'll help your environment, encouraging better health, lower energy bills, and maybe even a little shade a few summers from now.

Yet whenever the environment is discussed, the line between motivation and guilt trip is easily crossed. So the illustrator for the project needed both a passion for the subject and an accessible style — someone with a proven track record for communicating in ways that are both environmentally friendly and . . . friendly.

"The idea was to keep it light," says art director Derry Noyes, "not to scold as if shaking a finger and saying, 'Go do all these things and make the planet better.'"

She knew of one artist who might be perfect for the job: a filmmaker and animator who had founded a nonprofit group, Climate Cartoons, to create kid-friendly planet? Start with the person.

Early design explorations show Eli Noyes's playful approach to big-picture environmental messaging. Ultimately, the design team decided to focus on specific steps that the individual can take.

Easier Than You Think

environmental messages. So in the spirit of “reuse and recycle,” Derry recycled one of her oldest relationships — recruiting her older brother, Eli, for the project.

“He can come up with different approaches very quickly,” she says. “That’s the beauty of working with an animator. And he’s all about being playful.”

Early in the collaboration, it became clear that the original plan for four stamps would not be enough. As the process continued, researchers and experts suggested many more “go green” ideas. “We realized that you can’t do only four things to help the environment,” Eli Noyes says.

“We can all do so much more than that.”

Eventually, the four images became many more that Eli and Derry condensed to fit a pane of 16, including an innovation from Derry: As an example of putting nothing to waste, she worked the title of the pane itself into a stamp. Members of the Citizens’ Stamp Advisory Committee enthusiastically embraced the final result.

Just as the Postal Service is working every day to operate in a more environmentally friendly way, we can all make a difference . . . step by step.

As excitement over the project mounted, ideas exploded. Preliminary pane layouts show two stamp designs, then four, then eight. Ultimately, a vast field of concepts was winnowed down to a pane of 16 stamps (shown on page 4).

THE CIVIL WAR 1861 A Nation Touched with Fire

The American people and the Government at Washington may refuse to recognize it for a time; but the "inexorable logic of events" will force it upon them in the end; that the war now being waged in this land is a war for and against slavery.

Frederick Douglass

The last ray of hope for preserving the Union peaceably expired at the assault upon Fort Sumter.

Abraham Lincoln

I'll trace these gardens o'er and o'er,
Meditate on each sweet flower,
Thinking of each happy hour,
Oh, Johnny is gone for a soldier.
Traditional lament

I foresee that the country will have to pass through a terrible ordeal, a necessary expiation, perhaps, of our national sins.
Robert E. Lee

People who are anxious to bring on war don't know what they are bargaining for; they don't see all the horrors that must accompany such an event.

Thomas J. Jackson
